Research Tip – Prestatehood Statutes

I. History

For the first 17 years after Alaska was purchased from Russia in 1867, the U.S. Army, U.S. Navy, and Revenue Cutter Service were the governmental agencies responsible for law and justice in Alaska.

It wasn’t until 1884 when the District Organic Act (First Organic Act) provided a partial government for Alaska, designating it as a “district.” The First Organic Act created a civil and judicial government and declared that the laws of Oregon would be the laws for Alaska. The Oregon codes were replaced with laws drafted specifically for Alaska with the 1899 Alaska Penal Code and the 1900 Alaska Civil Code.

Several compilations of these various codes were arranged in the years following their passage. The Laws of Alaska; Embracing the Penal Code, the Code of Criminal Procedure, the Political Code, the Code of Civil Procedure, and the Civil Code (Carter Code), was arranged by Thomas Carter in 1900. Also completed in 1900 was Alaska Codes, Political, Civil and Civil Procedure: Approved June 6, 1900 (Boone Code) by Charles T. Boone. An additional compilation was done in 1906 by John Charlton, the Compilation of the Acts of Congress and Treaties Relating to Alaska from March 30, 1867, to March 3, 1905 (Charlton Code).

The First Organic Act was problematic in that it did not create a legislature nor permit Alaskans a delegate in Congress. These issues were remedied with the 1906 Alaska Delegate Act, which allowed Alaskans to elect their first representative to Congress, and the 1912 Territorial Organic Act (Second Organic Act), which gave Alaska territorial status and created the territorial legislature, allowing for self-governance of the new territory. The Compiled Laws of the Territory of Alaska, 1913 was the first code published for the new Territory of Alaska. Territorial codes were also published in 1933 and 1949.

The Alaska Constitutional Convention was held during the winter of 1955-56 in Fairbanks. The Alaska Constitution was voted on and passed in 1956, paving the way for statehood. The Alaska Statehood Act was signed into law in July 1958 and Alaska officially became the 49th state on January 3, 1959.

II. Where to Find

The following is a list of links to electronic versions of each document. Links to the Library of Congress, HathiTrust, Govinfo, and the Alaska Legislature are freely accessible to anyone regardless of location. HeinOnline and Westlaw are accessible from court and law library computers. Most of these documents are also available in print at the Anchorage, Fairbanks, and Juneau law libraries.
